Three Philosophers' Quotations

Directions: Using your Three Chinese Philosophies graphic organizer, determine which philosopher stated each quotation and write his name in the second column. Then, provide a 1-2 sentence explanation regarding how the quotation connects with that particular philosopher/philosophy in the third column.

Quotation	Stated by... (Name a philosopher)	Explain why you think the philosopher you picked said that particular quotation in 1-2 sentences.
“When gold and jade fill the hall, their possessor cannot keep them safe. When wealth and honors lead to arrogance, this brings its evil to itself. When the work is done, and one’s name is becoming distinguished, to withdraw into obscurity is the way of Heaven.”
“If law is definite, the superiors are esteemed and not violated. If the superiors are not violated, the sovereign will become strong and able to maintain the proper course of government.”
“Filial piety and brotherly obedience are perhaps the roots of humanity, are they not?”
“In governing a thousand-chariot state, be reverent to your duties and truthful; economize expenditure and love men; employ the people at proper times.”
“A state may be ruled by measures of correction; weapons of war may be used with crafty dexterity; but the kingdom is made one’s own only by freedom from action and purpose.”
“To govern the state by law is to praise the right and blame the wrong.”
